

THE TOP TEN TIPS FOR RAISING HAPPY HEALTHY CHILDREN

We all want our children to grow up to be happy, healthy, strong, contributing adults. As parents, we know that a big challenge in achieving this can be managing their behaviour.

According to the family research and support group “The Successful Parent” the first steps in managing behaviour is to build a strong, positive relationship with our children.

“The Successful Parent” has a top ten list of guidelines for managing your child's behaviour. iKi SRL helps you tick each and every one of the 10 boxes. Read the report below - and then come back and click here to GET iKi SRL @ Home for just $14.95.

#1 Parent/Child Relationship

This one leads the list because all of the others are dependent upon it. Basically, if you have not established a solid attachment between you and your child that is characterized primarily by positive regard (on your part), you do not have the foundation necessary from which to successfully manage behaviour. Children do what their parents say primarily because they care what their parent’s think of them or how they feel about them.

#2 Spending Time

This one goes along with the one above. You must spend time with your child on a regular basis that is not centred around behavioural problems, and this time should be used for play, conversation, and relationship-building activities. The more loved and understood your child feels by you, the easier it will be to manage his or her behaviour. The family that plays together stays together..

#3 Developmental Knowledge

Be sure that you know what your child is actually capable of doing depending on his or her age. Parents often personalize their children's misbehaviour as something they are "doing on purpose." Sometimes this is true, but more often the behaviour is quite natural for the developmental age. Knowing this helps you look at behaviour management more objectively and less reactively. When doing iKi SRL with your child/ren be sure to do activities that they are capable of. If you need, contact us for advice.

#4 Clear Delineation of Rules

This may seem like a given, but it is very easy to find yourself in the position of waffling on rules you have set. Likewise, it is equally problematic if you do not state every part of the rule in a clear and concise way. Don't lump a lot of rules together, especially for younger children. Make one very clear statement. The younger the child is, the more exact the wording must be. The iKi SRL Rulz and Actions can help you achieve this.

#5 Positive Reinforcement

Use positive reinforcement whenever possible. This is most helpful when a child successfully behaves in the way you have prescribed. Be careful, however, not to use material inducements for good behaviour (such as buying new toys, etc.). Reinforcements should be centered around feelings of self-esteem, accomplishment, and cooperation. Do something with your child such as play a game, go to the park, or simply give verbal praise and appreciation. The iKi SRL Power Positives practise also ties in well here. We will talk more about this in the coming weeks.

#6 Providing Consequences

For rules that don't seem to be followed using positive reinforcement, the parent must establish consequences for failure to comply. These must be realistic, match the nature of the infraction, and teach something if at all possible. Further, they must be consistently enforced. Start with small, time-limited consequences, and then slowly increase the time or intensity of the consequence for repeating the same infractions. When you can, use natural consequences. An example would be having your child work to earn the money to replace something he or she has destroyed. Utilising the iKi SRL Behaviour Reward & Warning system helps to monitor positive and negative behaviours and reward and issue warnings or reflection (time-out) where necessary.

#7 Repetition

Repetition is an integral part of all learning and mastery. "If at first you don't succeed, try again." Decide how many times you will repeat a command before acting on it. It really shouldn't be more than two or three times for the smaller child and less for the older child. You might start by giving a warning (or issuing a warning ticket) of what will happen if the rule is not followed, and then following through with your consequence (or issue additional warning ticket) after the warning is ignored. If warnings are ignored, it is the consistency of following through with the consequence that is the key to all your efforts.

#8 Consistency

This is another given, but perhaps the most difficult to facilitate. Consistency in rules and consistency in following through with consequences are both extremely important. Children naturally look for loopholes such as trying your patience when you're tired, but these are the times consistency is most important and effective.

#9 Parental Accord

If two parents are involved, they must be in accord with what the rules are, what the consequences are, and what the procedures are for carrying out these consequences. Never let a child restate what the other parent has said without first checking to be sure of the accuracy of the statements, and be sure that you and your partner are in complete agreement with rules before trying to enforce them. In the case of separated parents, it is always difficult to agree on many things after a separation, but rules and consequences for your child/ren should be at the forefront of your mind. The iKi SRL Rulz and Positive Behaviour Plan can help in providing this consistency and uniformity between the two homes.

#10 Model Behaviour

As always, who you are and how you act is the most potent guide and teacher for your child. Treat him/her with respect in all situations, and strive to manage his/her behaviour with a calm attitude that comes from your understanding that self-control is ultimately necessary and good for your child.

Original Source – The Successful Parent - Friday, 16 February 2001.

http://www.thesuccessfulparent.com/categories/discipline/item/top-ten-list-for-managing-your-child-s-behaviour#.VbgWN_mqgko